Car accidents are as familiar as the common cold but far more deadly. Yet their cause and control remain a serious problem, difficult to solve. Scientists have long said that this dangerous problem has three causes : the driver, the car and the road. If all drivers were careful at all times and if people and all road users respect and follow traffic rules, there would be few accidents.

Scientists have helped in making roads much safer. But the number of accidents continues to rise because of careless drivers and the big increase in the number of cars on roads.

Engineers always think of making cars in a better way so that they may protect the people inside them.

We are living in the age of computers. They are now used in hospitals, schools, factories, banks and different fields of life. Engineers use them to design buildings and bridges. Doctors depend on them to examine patients and analyse يحلل their blood samples. In the future, computers will be able to fly planes, drive electric cars, design and invent machines and control robots in factories. So, we should teach our children how to make use of the computer and how to benefit from it. We don't need pilots to fly planes in the future. Computers are important for three main reasons. They are flexible, accurate and they can store lots of information in their memory.
